1-800-GOT-JUNK? and 1-800-Recycling Join Forces For Recycling Power Partnership

July 27, 2010

John Shegerian & Brian Scudamore

Two toll free numbers and their websites have teamed up to fight waste. It was announced today that 1-800-GOT-JUNK? and 1-800-Recycling have partnered to provide users of the latter's website with a comprehensive listing for their local recycling needs.

Designed to make the recycling process easy and more accessible, 1-800-Recycling.com will now also be recommending 1-800-GOT-JUNK? as a service for times when no one else is able to 'take it away.' The concept will provide a new accessibility to recycling for the elderly or infirm, for single parents or those who simply have no time but still want their space back and still want to "do the right thing."

1-800-Recycling provides information about recycling services and facilities to anyone, anywhere by zip code. But in cases where there's no service or facility suitable in the area, 1-800-GOT-JUNK? will now be their recommended service.

Of the partnership, Brian Scudamore, Founder and CEO of 1-800-GOT-JUNK? said, "1-800-Recycling is doing an important thing, providing information on responsible and accessible recycling to people all across the United States. We are very happy to partner with them and offer their users another alternative while helping to keep recyclable waste out of the garbage."

"It's a perfect partnership," said John Shegerian, Chairman and CEO of Electronic Recyclers International, the nation's leading recycler of electronics and e-waste, and parent company of 1-800-Recycling.com. "While we each provide different services, they are very complimentary and we are both dedicated to making life easier for the average person who simply wants to recycle everything in an environmentally-responsible manner. We are honored to be teaming the two brands together!"
